Something About Water Gas.
To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sin:—Having read in your paper a few days since an account of water gas, I herewith send you an account of what they are doing in England with water gas, taken from the Newcastle Chronicle:
Water gas, a gas resulting from the decomposition of water, can now be made on a commercial scale at 4 pence per 1,000 feet, the first and most successful application of the new medium being that of the Leeds Forgo Company. Their plant capable of producing 40,000 eulid the gas produced is used not only for illumination, but for steam raising for metallurgical purposes. In addition to being able to carry on their extensive works without polluting the atmosphere with sulphurous smoke, the Leeds Forge Company estimate that a saving of £10,000 per annum is effected by the substitution of water gas for coal and coal gas. Water gas is the result of a chepical re.

works without polithing the atmosphere with sulphurous smoke, the Leeds Forge Company estimate that a saving of £10,000 per annum is effected by the substitution of water gas for coal and coal gas. Water gas is the result of a chemical reaction, which takes place in passing steam through incandescent carbonations matter, and may be regarded as the practical result on a wholesale scale of the ordinary laboratory experiment of decomposing water by passing steam through a highly-heated from tube. In the water gas apparatus the fuel is raised to a high temperature in a generator by the aid of an air-blast. This blowing is continued for ten minutes, during which period what is known as producer gas is given off. This can be used for engines and other purposes. At the end of ten minutes the valves are reversed, the air-blast stopped and steam is admitted at the top of the generator for four minutes. This steam is passed down through the incandescent fuel, where it becomes decomposed and a fixed by means of oxide of iron. A run of gas is made every fifteen minutes, during which time the yield from each generator at the Leeds Forge Works is about 17,500 cubic feet of producer gas is ghost of the gas results. For heating and wighting. Burnt in an ordinary way water gas gives a blue flaments are quickly heated to a white heat, producing a white glow of high illuminating power. Its production per ton of fuel is about 30,000 cubic feet, and with fuel at 8s per ton, labor at 3s 6d per man per day and the production going on continuously, it is found that the gas costs slightly under 4d per 1,000 cubic feet. With the success thus achieved there is reason to hope that its production may soon begome universal, and that its universal application for heating, not only in the factory but in the develing, may soon begome universal, and that its universal application for heating, not only in the factory but in the develing, may soon begome universal, and that its universal application for heating, not only in the factory but in the WHERLING. Tuesday. April 2.

The changes made in the quotations given this morning over those last reported are not numerous, and aside from the slight decline made in the price of rossted coffe in packages, are not of any special importance. In the grain line business has been exceedingly dull for some time past, but there is usually an improvement in the early part of this month and it is being looked for this year. There is considerable stuff offering, but the demand is very light; prices, however, have not succutated much of late. The last Chicago visible supply statement showed a decrease of over 800,000 bushels in the visible supply of wheat. There has been little change in the position of the local flour market for some days; the demand is fair and prices have only been changed in one or two small particulars. In the grocery line, the local coffee market is, taken as a whole, very firm at our present questions. Refined sugars continue firm, but are rather easier of purchase at the refineries than week ago. Tea is firm in all markets. Syrups stondy and New Oriestin molasses firm. Spices look favorable to the buyer.
